

Egg Membrane Lab

During the egg brain lab, I was able to have an in-depth experience with osmosis. I was able to see through the egg how it absorbed and shrunk depending on its surroundings, it also was a great example of hypertonic and hypotonic reactions to liquids. As a student, I am now able to understand information better when given an example.

The improvements I made on this assignment included adding work and better formatting. On the original poster we had forgotten to insert a piece of information, we also did not have a coherent layout of our poster, making it hard to read. If I could continue to improve my artifact I would have wanted photographs of the egg instead of drawings, in the future, I will be sure to remember to take pictures.